ABSTRACT

The College Board's Advanced Placement Program (APP) and College-Level Examination Program (CLEP) provide demonstrations which, when completed in secondary school or elsewhere, prepare new students for advanced study at college. A 1975 questionnaire was sent to the presidents of all two-year and four-year colleges seeking information on their institutions' APP and CLEP policies for students entering in the fall of 1975. This document includes: (1) all responding institutions, by their full names, alphabetically within their states; (2) the lowest APP grades and CLEP score normally accepted for some sort of placement, exemption, and/or credit; (3) brief descriptions of each institution's general APP and CLEP policies; and (4) the name of the official to whom requests for more detailed information may be sent. Introduction

The College Board's Advanced Placement Program (APP) and College-Level Examination Program (CLEP) provide demonstrations of college-level accomplishments which, when completed in secondary school or elsewhere, prepare new students for advanced study at college. Advanced Placement examinations, based on development committees' course descriptions, are normally three hours long and consist generally of two parts: objective and free response. Composite grades are assigned on a 5-point scale: 5—extremely well qualified; 4—well qualified; 3—qualified; 2—possibly qualified; 1—no recommendation.

CLEP examinations are 60 minutes long (General Examinations) or 90 minutes long (Subject Examinations). The examinations are based on courses at representative American colleges and are normed on the performance of enrolled students completing them for credit. General Examinations are scored on a 200–800 scale and Subject Examinations on a scale of 20–80. On the Subject Examinations, optional 90-minute essay questions are also provided; candidates who complete them have their answers sent directly to the colleges they designate.

In spring 1975 the College Board sent a questionnaire to the presidents of all two- and four-year colleges, seeking information on their institutions' Advanced Placement and CLEP policies for students entering in the fall of 1975. This book contains the information received in response to the questionnaire. It is divided into two parts.

Part I lists all responding institutions, by their full names, alphabetically within their states. In it they report the lowest APP grades and CLEP scores that they normally accept for some sort of placement, exemption, and/or credit. An underlined score for a CLEP Subject Examination (for example 60) means that the additional essay is required.

Part II also lists the responding institutions alphabetically within their states; offers a brief description (if reported) of each institution's general APP and CLEP policies; and provides the name of the official to whom requests for more detailed information may be sent.

The colleges were asked to report their policies on the following Advanced Placement and CLEP examinations.

The following considerations should be kept in mind by every reader.

1. The Advanced Placement grades and CLEP scores listed here are the lowest that the institutions normally accept as evidence of some college-level work already done. Many colleges grant this recognition automatically, yet in a variety of ways, depending on the level of the examinations, the specific grade or score, and the general policies and practices of the college. Other colleges make occasional, or even frequent, exceptions to their policies listed here. In any event, qualified students generally receive exemption, advanced placement, and appropriate course credit, or any of these. Specific college catalogs should be consulted for details.

2. The figures under "Sophomore Standing" indicate, for Advanced Placement, how many full AP examinations accepted for credit by the institution are regularly required to qualify new students for the option of immediate sophomore standing or its practical equivalent. For CLEP the response of "Yes" or "No" indicates the use of General Examinations for this purpose. Again, specific college catalogs should be consulted for details.

3. A blank means that the college does not offer assurance of normal action on receipt of a specific grade or score. This may be because no use is ever made of the examination at hand, or it may be because the college requires additional interviews or local tests. The college statements, in Part II, generally make this matter clear. But, again, while this book does afford a general overview of Advanced Placement and CLEP policies in American colleges, individuals and their counselors should also consult the colleges' detailed catalog statements and the officials listed here.
